READ THE TEXT AND SELECT THE BEST ANSWER (1, 0)

When people decide to start making changes in their lives in order to be healthier, they develop an interest in organic food. All types of foods can be organic and all of them will increase both physical and mental health. The main things that people ask regarding organic food is what the "organic" word actually means and what is the difference between the organic food and the conventionally grown food. The definition of organic food from the USDA* National Organic Program defines is as follows:

"Organic food is produced by farmers who emphasize the use of renewable resources and the conservation of soil and water to enhance environmental quality for future generations. Organic meat, poultry, eggs, and dairy products come from animals that are given no antibiotics or growth hormones. Organic food is produced without using most conventional pesticides, fertilizers made with synthetic ingredients or sewage sludge, bioengineering, or ionizing radiation.

Before a product can be labeled "organic," a Government-approved certifier inspects the farm where the food is grown to make sure the farmer is following all the rules necessary to meet USDA organic standards. Companies that handle or process organic food before it gets to your local supermarket or restaurant must be certified, too."
